LONDON, Jan. 14 .- Pay increases that may range from 30 to 50 per cent and demands for a six-hour day are expected to be made by the Miners' Federation of Great Britain meeting Employment Service Head

In justification of the demands for a liberal wage increase, President Greenell, of the Lancashire and Cheshire Miners' Federation, points out that government figures show that while prices increased during the war from 120 to 130 per cent the wage increases granted the miners were only 75 to 83 per cent, the maximum wage now being are planning to come to America as are planning to come to America as twelve shillings, 5 pence, or about $3 a are planning to come to America as

The shortage of coal in Great Britain is such as to place the miners in a strategic position to press their demands in a manner not possible under conditions more favorable to the government and the mine owners.

The shorter workday movement is not confined to the miners. Since the signing of the armistice the movement

On February 1 the railway men will begin work under an eight-hour day schedule, the application of which has presented a feature which would be unthinkable in the United States. In making the railway service conform to the new workday, middle of the night trains are to be abandoned, it is said, the outlook being for two eight-hour shifts, outside of which no trains will run. Obviously the short runs of England make the situation in this respect entirely different from that in America. The machinists and shipyard workers have obtained a forty-seven-hour week since the signing of the armistice and other labor organizations are making moves in the same direction. Among these are the London tube workers, who are also asking for a forty-seven hour week. The National Association of Textile Unions is pressing for a forty-five hour week to re-Peril to U. In facing the great moral issue, America would not play the ostrich and hide its head in the sand, but expressed the hope that by attacking Bolshevism at the source—hunger—the use of violation of the Reds was amplified by Dr. W. C. Huntington, just back after two years in Russia as the American commercial attaché. The former trade ensured that Bolshevism, which, he said, is a vulture which feeds on hunger of the stomach and anarchy of the mind, must be stamped out, and insisted that, if it becomes necessary to use force on a large scale, the United States must not hesitate. Russia, he said, is now a laboratory for social experiment, and vivisection is being practiced with a vengeance.

Nations Cannot Live Alone

"It was characteristic of American contengy that when the President announced the close of active military operations through the signing of the armistice many in our land jumped to the conclusion that the war was over and that all that was necessary was to take up the threads, go ahead and respectively. A programme of readjustment was suggested, and we were to push ahead with business as usual.

These ardent spirits forgot, however, certain facts which made their case lasted all day, with an hour's introducers. One cannot in truth promote foreign calcust sever without thereby aid that delegates from Socialist, I. W. W. and other radical bedies would not be seated.

This ruling was sustained by a viva was times threatened to end in a free-for-all tight. The radicals failed to obtain a rollicall or a division of the house, and in consequence are now charging that they were "steam-rollered."

To-morrow, they say, they will renew the fight when the rules committee to take up the threads, go ahead and readily such the fight when the rules committee to take up the threads, go ahead and readily such the fight when the rules committee was up

"In thinking about trade," the Secretary declared, "It seems to be generally overlooked that the war is still on, and that therefore certain limitations must still be enforced. One of the express terms of the armistice provides for the continuance of the blockade on Germany, and another for continued censorship. We cannot discontinue these without concurrent action of other nations with whom we are associated. In a certain sense a league of nations already exists and we cannot break away from these two restraints without concurrent action. I

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 14.—While it is generally predicted that the Federal prohibition amendment will pass the legislature here when it comes up this week, a new and formidable obstacle has sprung up in the shape of the New Hampshire Anti-Cider Lengue, a sert of a "dog in the manger" scheme of the liquor forces to the effect that if the farmers want prohibition of "regular" liquors, the liquor folk will see that their favorite cider is taken away from them as well. There is a special exemption for cider in the present state prohibition law.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Jan. 14.—The Federal prohibition amendment will be adopted in Vermont, according to general prediction. For fifty years, up to 1902, state prohibition was in force. In 1902 a local option measure was passed and two attempts since to repeal it have failed. In the last state campaign, Governor Clement, Republican, defeated candidates pledged to the amendment in the primary and was victorious over the Democratic nominee, who was pledged to it, in the election.
